PLOT

After being seriously injured in an accident, wealthy aristocrat Philippe hires a black guy named Driss, who has just been released from prison, as his assistant. Despite the fact that Philippe is confined to a wheelchair, the young man manages to bring a spirit of adventure and adventure into his gray and measured life...

INTERESTING FACT

- The film is based on events from the life of French aristocrat Philippe Pozzo di Borgo and Algerian immigrant Abdel Sillou. In 1993, Philippe was left paralyzed in an accident. Three years later, his wife Beatrice died of cancer, and the millionaire fell into severe depression. Philippe could not take care of himself, he needed an assistant. Of all the candidates, he chose the former offender Abdel, who came to the interview in order not to lose his benefits. The 42-year-old millionaire and the 21-year-old guy "from the bottom of society" quickly found a common language. The story of their friendship formed the basis of one of the most popular French films of all time.

what to teach 1+1

- This film teaches us several things,
- namely the ability to look at the inner qualities, character and not appearance
- Do not be racist

Acting and Music

- Olivier Nakache and Eric Toledano focused on acting, which allowed them to create a real masterpiece. François Cluzet and Omar Sy conveyed the emotions and characters of their heroes with amazing precision, making the viewer empathize with them and rejoice in their victories.
- The soundtrack to the film is a separate story. It makes the viewer feel the emotions of the characters even more strongly and immerse themselves in the atmosphere of the film. The music creates a feeling of freedom, joy and sadness, reflecting the whole range of feelings that the characters experience.
